

Notes to Chapter I

1. A very fine treatment of the general question is H. O. Taylor, The Classical Heritage of the Middle Ages (N. Y., 1911), many ideas of which are included in his The Medieval Mind, whose 4th ed. (London, 1925), I have used.

2. I have used the Loeb Library Isocrates: Vol I, ed. George Norlin (N.Y., 1928);

Vol II, Ibid. (N. Y., 1929); Vol III, ed. Larue Van Hook (N.Y., 1945).

3. Ibid., Vol. III: I, To Dionysius, Tyrant of Syracuse; II and III, To Phillip of Macedon; IV, To Antipater, Regent of Macedon; V, To Alexander; VI, To the Children of Jason, Tyrant of Pherae; VII, To Timotheus, Tyrant of Haracleia; VIII, To the Oligarchs of Mytilene; and IX, To Archidamus III, King of Sparta.

4. VI and VII.

5. Ibid., Vol I, 40-71. Nicocles, the son of Evagoras, was the king of New Salamis in Cyprus.

6. Ibid., 76-113.

7. Figures in parenthesis refer to the editor's division of the Greek text.

8. This observation and the general tone shows that he thinks of monarchy only in terms of the Greek polis.

9. III, 434-443. Specifically, to Thebe and her half-brother Tiphonus, who followed a bloody succession, as described by Xenophon, Hellenica, VI, 4.3.

10. Ibid., 448-455.

11. I have used the Loeb library edition of the Walter Miller (N. Y., 1914),

2 vols. References are to the divisions of that text.

~~12. Hiero and Agesilaus~~

12. Hiero and Agesilaus are in the Loeb Library Scripta Minora ed. E C. Marchant (London, 1925).
